Once the Company has notified the Purchaser that the Works are ready for inspection, the Purchaser and the Company shall agree a time for the Purchaser to inspect the Works. During the inspection, the Purchaser shall identify any areas where the Works do not meet the standard specified in the contract. If there are no such faults, the Company shall issue, and both parties shall sign, a completion certificate; the date the certificate is signed by both parties shall be the date of completion. If the inspection identifies any faults, the Purchaser shall identify these to the Company and the Company shall remedy such faults within a reasonable time. Once any faults have been remedied, the Purchaser and the Company shall again jointly inspect the Works; if there are no faults, the completion certificate shall be signed by both parties and completion shall take place.
